FLIGHTS + CAR HIRE.

Flights:

As an important transport hub between Europe and North America, Reykjavik Airport serves as the only major international airport in Iceland and benefits from frequent scheduled flights.

Value fares between the UK and Reykjavik are available via EasyJet, whilst the national carrier IcelandAir also operate with reasonable prices.

 From £40.00 to £120.00/return.

Car Hire:

It is highly recommended to invest in a powerful four-wheel drive vehicle. This will prove beneficial on rural roads as you stray off the beaten path.

14-day Rental of SUV — from £650.00***

**Additional charges likely apply to drivers under the age of 25.*

Keep the car running:

Estimated cost of fuel — £250.00.

Given that you will complete side trips whilst based in each location, make sure your budget allows for double the amount of this estimate.

PREPARATION.

Navigate from A to B:

Before packing up your bags to explore the stunning landscapes of Iceland in all their splendour, take time to prepare to ensure a care-free adventure.

A vital component of any Icelandic road-trip is a satellite navigation system, as reliance on mobile networks in rural areas may lead to some unwanted issues.

Whether you choose to rent one for the duration of your rental, or bring along your own, just make sure it is fitted and operational before setting off.

Reserve:

Given just how small some of the resort towns are, dealing with a high influx of tourists results in a scarce availability of accommodation and some titanic price tags.

Plan well ahead, or else you may find yourself settling for expensive and lacklustre lodging.

THE FEATURE.

One trip will never be able to sum up the countless wonders of Iceland. Summer and winter expeditions are completely different experiences, channelling two opposing sides of the natural beauty found here. Multiple visits may be a necessity if — or when — you fall madly in love with this spell-binding dreamland.
